What are some reasons why I should go out for an RFP?

R request
F or
P roposal

- Poor existing service.
- Rates are slow to be adjusted or bank is difficult to negotiate rate adjustments in line with the marketplace.
- Local presence is not there anymore.
- Show taxpayers that the entity is fulfilling their fiduciary responsibility to get the most value out of their tax dollars.

What are some reasons why I should go out for an RFP?

R request
F or
P roposal

- Potentially lock in an agreement for a set amount of time.
- Some pricing on high use services, like ACH or checks, is higher than competitors but bank won't negotiate.
- Technology or products offered are not robust enough to meet the needs of the municipality, meaning our needs as a client have changed and our bank can't keep up.

What are some reasons why I should go out for an RFP?

R request
F or
P roposal

- State law requires it.
- It has been 3/5/7/10 years since the last RFP.
- A GFOA best practice is to re-bid financial services every 5 years.

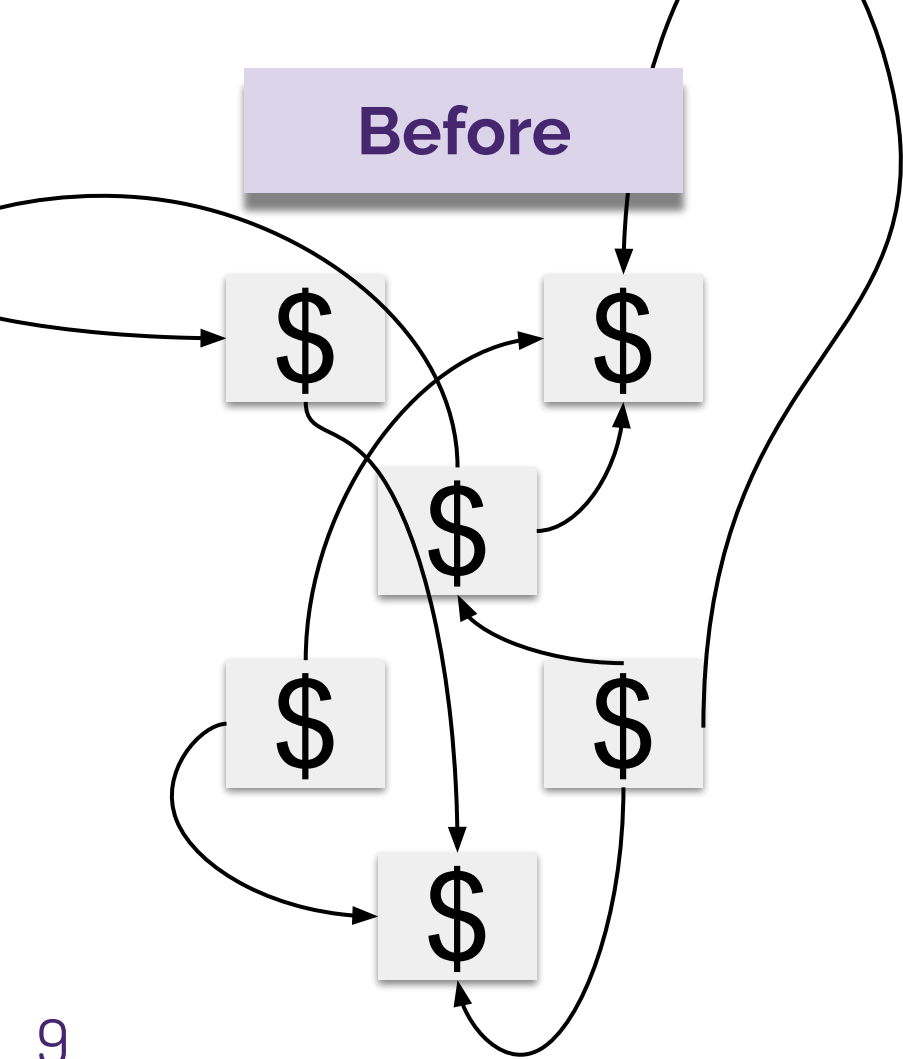

Prior to a Banking RFP

1. Review account analysis statements for costs and volumes
2. Review bank account structure for efficiency and cost.
3. Look at business processes for both efficiency and internal controls and risks.
 - Focus on key processes such as revenue collection, disbursements and payroll

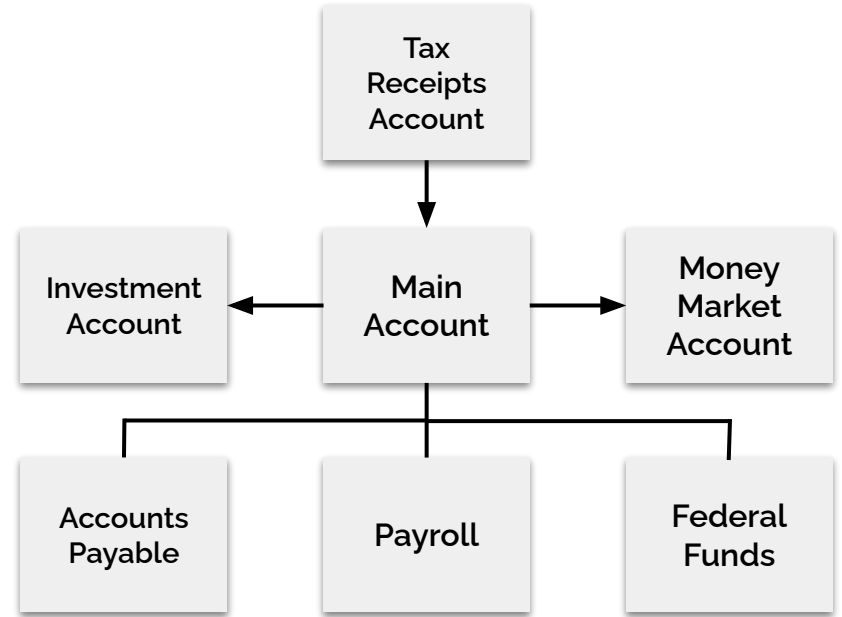

Prior to a Banking RFP

4. Monitor banking arrangements and products.
5. Analyze financial markets and the marketplace to understand benchmarks
6. Give consideration to business continuity planning
7. Meet with procurement team to understand their requirements.
8. Give yourself plenty of time!

Business Continuity Planning

- ❑ Consider incorporating “BCP” into your RFP requirements and questions.
- ❑ Covid showed we could perform many treasury functions remotely and we made the choice to work remotely or at least minimize staff in office working. What services do we need to develop contingencies for?
- ❑ How does our treasury business continuity plan synch up with other financial functions in our government? Are there questions in the RFP we should be asking?
- ❑ Do we have duplicative systems/processes in the event an issue with one of our financial institutions arises? (Could we execute vendor payments or payroll from a secondary bank?)

Case Study

The County wanted confirm it's current banking partner was offering rates and services that were competitive in the marketplace, and harnessing all available treasury services technology and yet looking to incorporate services their current bank did not provide if available at a reasonable price.

- ❑ The County wanted to be sure they were receiving the best ECR in the marketplace.
- ❑ Wanted to insure their rates on cash at the bank were competitive.

The Results

The client decided to stay with current bank with no fees and an indexed interest rate on cash that resulted in increased value of nearly $1 Million annually.

Takeaways

RFP Takeaways

- ❑ Recently been seeing a decline in Earnings Credit Rates with a lot of banks also passing on their “balanced based charges”. With this, line-item fees are also slightly higher.
 - ❑ This means you need to keep more cash on deposit to offset any bank fees.
- ❑ Many banks are offering competitive overnight sweep arrangements for idle cash which are being chosen more often than a more traditional “interest on cash” structure.

- ❑ Service capability, technology, and customer service are becoming a lot more weighted than just Net Value.
- ❑ While entities are hesitant to go through a transition to a new bank, they are open more than ever to a transition if service and technology is lacking at their current provider.

Why consider a Banking RFP?

As the interest rate environment continues to evolve, ensuring you receive marketplace value from your banks is crucial. While the RFP process is oftentimes an additional burden which your office likely doesn't have the capacity to take on, our completely digital tool, rfpPrep can simplify the process while taking significant work off your plate.

Providing you with everything from an issuance document template, to evaluating proposals and showing an apples-to-apples comparison of responding banks, you can ensure you are receiving the best value and needed services. If you are considering a banking RFP, we would welcome the opportunity to share a bit more about rfpPrep and how we are simplifying the process.
